SOUTH CAROLINA MONEY

We will take South Carolica thoney at par in payment for subscriptions to the Parrior.

HARD TIMES-PREPARE TO MEET THEM .- A look through the political kabid scope just at this time presents a scene of more general agitation and alarm among the people than has ever before been witnessed since the for mation of the government. The signal triumph of a purely sectional party in the contest for the Presidency—the complete over throw of the conservative streagth of the nation-and the hot-headed secssion move ments in South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama resulting therefrom-have thrown the country-esp cially the Southern countryinto the very jaws of a fearful crisis, the effects of which are already felt, to a greater or less degree, in every community. They are not felt alone by politicians who may have seen their hopes of future advancement "blighted in their bad and bloom" by the wreck of old parties and the springing-up of a new; they are felt by every class of people, and more than all by those who are least prepared to meet them. We refer to the effects which this wretched state of things is exerting even thus early upon the monetary offairs-the business and trade of the country. As a genera thing the rise and fall of political parties is compar tively, a master of no great moment to the masses of the people, whose socia domestic and business interests are but little effected thereby. But in this instance, where in a party that has nearly bankrupted the government is to be succeeded by a party which is destined, we far, to force the same calamity upon the people, the case is widely different Of all panies this country has ever yet known, the most disastrous to the

The people should at once prepare to meet survived many a storm in the past. society, and do all in their newer to mibold and sustain one another during the storm: night. To use a vulgar expression, they should play into each other's bands, as far as they con sistently can, and by giving and receiving aid and comfort, cause the pressure to fall There is plenty of money in the country to render the country comfortable, and all that is wanted is some effectual method of bring ing it into circulation. So long as it may liidle, it is of no more benefit to the people than if it were so much copper and blank paper. Ten dollars in active circulation are of more practical value to a community in times like these, if not at all times, then ten thousand lying hid away in the strong box of the miser. Then, if you have ten dollars and owe it to Tox, pay him, that he may pay Dick, who in his turn will pay Harry, and i HARRY is the man we take him to be, he will pay you, and you will then be ready to pay somebody else. By this means a small amount of money goes a long way, and ac complishes a very large amount of good.

A PLEASANT PICTURE.-The local editor of the Petersburg Express is a young man of aste, but he suffers it to run away with him. For instance: What a lovely picture a young lady presents, says he, on a cold morning, with all her winter fixings on, coming down town at a brisk speed, innocent of any intention whatever, other than being comfortable and looking pretty! A sweet little bonnet, daintily trimmed with brown ribbon and on the inside, with a delicate white fur, tied on with a neat bow; a soft, downy comforter encompassing enough of her neck to disclose a little of its snowy purity, and gracfully descending in front; a tunic of dark brown, or a mantle of black cloth, with neat rich trimming; a dress of calico, and two little jet black gaiters underneath, peeping, like mice, in and out, and completing an ensemble sufficient to make a susceptible youth feel like spending his last ten in rings, gift books, a marriage license and the minister.
